2. Retrospective

In your weekly meeting, you should spend a few minutes discussing how the group is functioning. What aspects of the group dynamics contribute to the success of the project? In addition, raise any issues—best done directly but with humor and kindness—that you believe are interfering with the effectiveness of the group and your ability to complete the project on time.

The retrospective should be an open and safe space for the team to reflect on and discuss what works well (and what doesn't!) so you can improve. Don't make it personal, and don't take it personally. Be open to criticism and offer constructive and polite critiques. Focus on how to improve the quality of your team and the product you are developing.

1. Appreciations: Daniel was incharge of building the UML class diagram and helped the process of creating it as a team go smoothly.
2. Success: The creation of our UML diagram was extremely helpful in putting together an exact plan for features and functionality for our website
3. Failures: Not much work was done on the github to actually implement changes
4. Barriers: When making changes to our concept we need to remember that adding issues and reminders in the github as to what we want to change would be helpful
5. What we should try next time: Next week we should experiment more with compartmentalizing our work load into different meetings

3. Next steps

Think about what needs to be done and assign tasks. Update your activity management system with new tasks, actual hours spent in the activities, and corresponding GitHub issues. Summarize these tasks here.

Jesse

- Continue fixing bugs, for example Streak counter doesn't update properly.

Cole

- Modify sidebar formatting to be stacked blocks like our new mockup suggests

Dorian

- Add settings tab

Travian

- Maybe add more themes if they look nice cause everything ive tired has been horrible

Daniel

- Work on the website's flow, and organization of the different sections.

James

- Work on bug and new issues
